BASELAYER open ⊕

MIDLAYER close ⊗

Midlayers are primarily intended to provide warmth when layering garments. This category also displays an extremely large number of natural materials in Winter 22/23. The variety on offer is extraordinary. The focus is on newer constructions to generate heat, yet at the same time, manufacturers are attempting to reduce or completely avoid the use of micro-plastics in the development process. More focus is being placed on natural fibres such as micro-modal, cotton, hemp, organic cotton, Tencel, merino wool or fabrics made of soya. Hemp is increasingly replacing the use of cotton. The much lower water and energy consumption levels alone, compared to cotton or polyester, make hemp a better alternative. Furthermore, hemp is in no need of any chemicals, making it a fully natural eco-fibre. On top of all this, there are high-loft fleeces made of 100 per cent polyester, super technical knitwear with Seaquel fibre components, Polartec Highloft, Overdied Grip Velour, biodegradable polyester up to elaborate polyester 3D constructions. Tencel articles continue to feature prominently; the same goes for new air-chamber variants. All fleece fabrics, e.g. made without any use of micro-plastic. There is a trend towards Sherpa fabric, which is replacing environmentally friendly option due to the low amount of shedding micro-plastic.
